Can Denmark build a new offshore wind farm?

Denmark has struggled to attract bids to construct new offshore wind farms. Manuel Romano/NurPhoto via Getty Images Seeking to boost flagging investment in offshore wind power, Denmark's government on Monday announced aid of up to 55.2 billion kroner ($8.3 billion) with a new call for tenders.

What does the Copenhagen call for action mean for the wind industry?

The wind industry's ' Copenhagen Call for Action ' highlights 3 steps to boost Europe's energy independence and competitiveness. Amid unprecedented economic insecurity, the EU's new Clean Industrial Deal puts electrification and the accelerated build-out of renewables at the heart of Europe's industrial strategy.

Why does Denmark not bid on offshore wind?

According to Danish offshore wind developer Ørsted, offshore wind has an "unfavorable risk-reward balance." Analysts attribute Denmark's lack of bids in its recent offshore wind energy to a rigid auction system, an inability to adjust to shifting economic conditions, and heightened competition.

Why is the wind industry gathering in Copenhagen?

The wind industry gathers in Copenhagen as Europe faces unprecedented competitiveness and security challenges. As a homegrown and affordable source of energy, wind is uniquely placed to help strengthen Europe's energy security and competitiveness. But the build-out of wind is too slow today.
